Henrietta Szold, One Of World's Outstanding Leaders, Gave Her Life To Jewish Service

Henrietta Szold, American-Jewish Zionist leader and the founder of Hadassah, who had been recently ill in Hadassah University Hospital on Mount Scopus since December, died on February 13 at the age of 84.

Miss Szold was a woman of great charm. Her hair was abundant and gray, her eyes dark and expressive. She was always characterized by poise, sincerity and efficiency and had been described as the "most brilliant Jewish woman in America." She engaged in considerable literary and translating work and was exceptionally proficient with Hebrew. Quietly, and over a long period of years, she wove her name inextricably into the pattern of Jewish progress in Palestine.

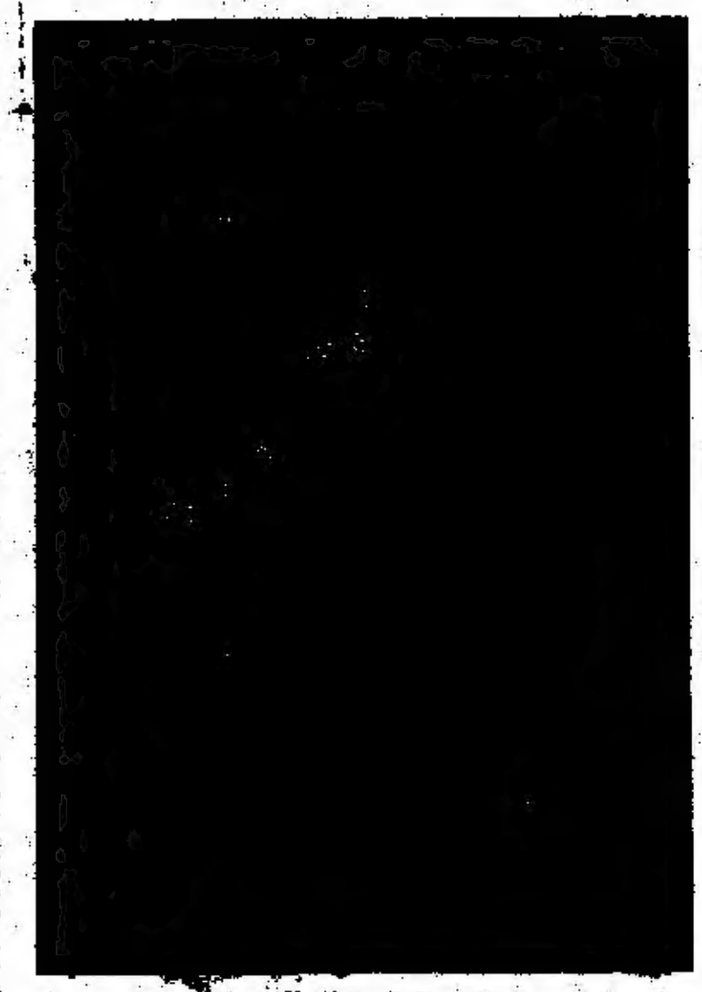
Slight in stature and feminine in appearance, Henrietta Szold had enormous energy and capacity for work. She rarely rested, although rising at 6 a. m. and going to bed at late hours after full days of work. Even in her late seventies she never hesitated to make the four-hour trip from Jerusalem to Haifa to meet all boats of refugees which brought young Jewish immigrants. She took personal interest in these emigrants, accompanying them to their settlements and helping them to get adjusted to new conditions of life.

She was born on Dec. 31, 1860, in Baltimore. Her mother was Sophie Schaar, and her father, Rabbi Szold, a rabbi and a scholar, taught her Hebrew, Latin and German. A brilliant girl, she decided to become a teacher after graduating from high school at the age of fifteen. Throughout her twenties, she found the opportunity to do so in aiding the Jews, who began to come in greater numbers to the United States, fleeing from Russia.

Her life was such that her eightieth birthday was that of a "prophetess in Israel", marked by celebrations in Palestine and throughout the United States. President and Mrs. Roosevelt signed their names in a huge birthday book which contained 94,000 signatures, and 500 birthday gatherings took place in forty-six States. A birthday gift of $25,000 for the protection of the welfare of the people of Palestine during the war was cabled to Miss Szold as a tribute to the veteran Zionist leader. In an editorial, "A Pioneer at 80," The Times again praised her outstanding qualities as a social worker:

"Her beautiful spirit has known no religious, racial or political frontiers. She has earned an untold wealth in love and admiration. May she long enjoy it."

When a nation-wide movement was launched to celebrate Miss Szold's seventy-fifth birthday, the "foremost Jewish woman of contemporary time" was on the high seas from Palestine to America. The celebration under the auspices of Hadassah lasted thirty days and coincided with Chanukah, the Feast of Lights. For her social work she was made a honorary citizen of Tel Aviv, and The New York Times said editorially that the occasion should not pass without mention of her translation from the German [illegible] of [illegible]



Henrietta Szold

[illegible] concentrated [illegible] Jews into Palestine—Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization, and Youth Aliyah, which supervises the resettlement of Jewish youth in Palestine.

She lived and worked in Palestine after the Jewish National Home was founded there in 1919. She made Jerusalem her home and came back to America only on short visits, when she needed more help for the charity work she was directing in Palestine.

In 1893 Miss Szold became the secretary of the newly created Jewish Publication Society of America, which carried on a wide correspondence with foreign writers and the translation into English of many foreign works. Some of the translations were made by Miss Szold herself, who also edited with Cyrus Adler, president of Dropsie College, at Philadelphia, the American Jewish Year Book. Her name was well known in the world of Jewish literature, and she was of much assistance to Jewish writers, such as Sholem Asch and Zangwill.

Social work, however, attracted her more than literary fame. After having worked for several years among Jewish immigrants in America, she decided in 1909 to make a trip to Palestine, at the time under Turkish rule. She was impressed by the low standard of living of Palestine Jews, by their illiteracy and the wide diffusion of disease among them. Frequency of trachoma, an illness of the eyes, appeared particularly striking to her, and she returned to America after a year with the determination of organizing medical help to Palestine Jews.

With this purpose she created in 1912 with thirty-six Jewish women a group called Hadassah (the Hebrew name of Queen Esther who pleaded for her people with King Ahasuerus). Their object was to give medical relief to Palestine and to foster Zionism in America.

Within a few months of the beginning of Hadassah, Nathan Straus became interested in its work. He financed the sending of the first two district nurses to Jerusalem—the first of a long series of benefactions to Palestine, many of them granted through the women's organization.

During the First World War the work was handicapped by the drafting of doctors and nurses. In 1916 Palestine appealed to the Zionist Organization of America for doctors, nurses and medical necessities; the most pressing grant. The response to the appeal was entrusted to the then [illegible] [illegible] dramatically constructive [illegible] part of the world where trachoma, malaria and skin diseases were normally prevalent, Hadassah built up clinics to combat those enemies of humanity by combating the ignorance that fostered them. The preventive aspect of its work was stressed from the beginning by its leaders among whom Miss Szold remained conspicuous. Infant welfare stations were first in the Near East [illegible] up under Hadassah sponsorship, and school hygiene was introduced in 1918.

The war slowed Hadassah's work, but in 1919 it was extended on a much larger scale on Miss Szold's initiative. An ardent Zionist for many years, she saw her dream come true with the creation in Palestine of a Jewish National Home. Although almost sixty years old, she did not hesitate in deciding that the Jews of Palestine would need her in those difficult first years of readjustment and organization.

She left New York in February, 1920, to make her home in Jerusalem and to take personal supervision of the Hadassah medical unit, which could now be enlarged, thanks to generous donations from Europe and America.

The Hadassah membership rose quickly in the years that followed the war, and in 1938 it totaled 75,000, with groups of women organized in 410 American towns. By June 1926, Hadassah had raised $1,000,000, of which the greater part was used for building hospitals and medical posts and supplying Palestine with medical stores. Hospitals were soon opened in Jerusalem, Haifa, Tiberias, Safed and Tel-Aviv. A school of nurses founded by Hadassah received the name of Henrietta Szold school.

In 1926 Miss Szold, who had returned to New York to report on the Hadassah activity in Palestine, was unanimously re-elected president, and was also made vice-chairman of the Zionist Organization of America. By 1928, as Miss Szold reported on a subsequent brief visit to the United States, the infection of trachoma among Jewish children of Palestine had been reduced to 12 per cent as against 70 per cent before the war. In 1929, the Zionist Congress reconstituted its executive council and elected Miss Szold as one of its three new members. In 1933 she was nominated honorary president of Hadassah, and in 1940 was made secretary for health, education and social welfare.

Survivors Eager To Go To Palestine, Zionist Official Says

Eliahu Dobkin, head of the immigration department of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, estimated in an interview with Julian Louis Meltzer, of the New York Times, that 1,200,000 Jews survived of the 6,000,000 who had been under German rule during the war, and that most of them were eager to come to Palestine.

Of these survivors 300,000 are still under German domination, 900,000 are in liberated areas or in countries of refuge like Russia and neutral lands to which they escaped.

Only half remain of the 360,000 Jews who lived in France in 1939. About a third survive of the 900,000 Jewish inhabitants of Rumania, including Transylvania. Less than 10 per cent remain of the 3,500,000 Polish Jews, of whom 50,000 are in liberated areas of Poland and 200,000 are in Russia.

Mr. Dobkin added that 45,000 Jews live in Bulgaria, 10,000 in Greece, 18,000 in Belgium and 30,000 in freed sections of Italy. Twenty-seven thousand refugees are in Switzerland, 13,000 are in Sweden and approximately 100,000 survive in Hungary.

The Jews lost during the war twenty-five times more killed than the entire fatal casualties on war fronts or at home through enemy aerial action throughout the British Commonwealth, Mr. Dobkin declared.

"Those who emerged from this holocaust of annihilation confront bleak realities and a no less grim future," Mr. Dobkin said. "Six months ago, in the first flush of liberation, it was believed that the nations among whom Jewish remnants survived would tolerate them. But now it transpires that even those few do not have sound prospects of a normal existence. There are even less possibilities than there were for the larger number of Jewish inhabitants who lived in those countries before the Nazi liquidation measures began."

Adolf Hitler's methods of political indoctrination left the former vassal populations with a firm conviction that Jews constituted a superfluous element, Mr. Dobkin stressed. He said reports from various liberated countries supported this assertion.

In a broadcast over the official Lublin radio, Gen. Wladyslaw Zavalnyk, deputy commander in chief of the Polish Army, said, "there is open anti-Semitism, and a hostile attitude to the vestiges of the Jewish community remaining in Poland."

A survey made by the Union of Jewish Communities in Rumania found that 55,000 Jews, half of those still alive, needed charity maintenance. Confiscated property and dwellings are not being returned to Jews there.

A report from Greece said that only one bookshop in Salonika had been restored to its former Jewish owner. It asserted that Jews returning from the hills, where they hid during the Nazi occupation, could not get their former dwell-

HYDRO Lightens The Way!

They Wouldn't Have Believed It!

● If anyone had told the office managers of the early nineties that in a few years, as time goes, electrically powered machines would do, in seconds, the work that took hours of toil, they wouldn't have believed it.

Yes, electricity has certainly lightened the way in this streamlined age. In the city or on the farm we rely on it for light, for heat, for power, for comfort. It lightens our burdens, dispels darkness and increases our pleasures. The men who supply Hydro to our homes—have made it so dependable, so economical that it is an accepted part of our daily life.

Yet, so great and varied are the possible services of electricity that the benefits we have so far accepted represent little more than the most obvious uses. It would be rash indeed to attempt to forestall or limit the future applications of electric power. In planning for tomorrow, take full advantage of the benefits that electricity and electrical equipment can bring to everyone.

How long is 3 weeks, Ivan?

• Hitler boasted that he would smash Russia in three weeks . . . Ivan's courage, resourcefulness and fighting skill have already spun those three weeks into a third year.

What is three weeks . . . what is Time itself to Ivan but a succession of minutes, each one marked by the fall of a Nazi soldier.

We have helped Ivan destroy Hitler's timetable by sending planes, tanks, guns, shells, food. It is a proud thing to share even a little in Russia's triumph to this hour.

We who make the high-proof alcohol for the smokeless powder in Ivan's high explosives also have a special way of measuring Time. In our plants, wholly converted to war production, we mark the passing of each hour by the thousands of gallons of high-proof alcohol flowing from our giant stills. Three weeks, three months, three years . . . it will go on flowing until the last Axis soldier has laid down either his body or his arms . . . in unconditional surrender!

THE HOUSE OF SEAGRAM

ALCOHOL FOR WAR IS USED IN THE MANUFACTURE OF SYNTHETIC RUBBER, MEDICINES, AIRPLANE VARNISHES, WATERPROOF GUNS AND MANY OTHER PRODUCTS. EVERY SEAGRAM PLANT IN CANADA AND THE UNITED STATES IS ENGAGED 100% IN THE PRODUCTION OF HIGH-PROOF ALCOHOL FOR WAR.

Two years ago, we of The House of Seagram published this advertisement in tribute to the heroic Russian soldier.

Today, we are repeating this message in renewed tribute to the millions of Ivans whose "courage, resourcefulness and fighting skill" have now freed Russian soil and beaten the enemy back to the very threshold of Berlin.

"An Institution of Merciful Service Asks Your Support!"

Under the dynamic leadership of Mr. Allan Bronfman and Mr. A. H. Jacoby, supported by devoted co-workers, the Jewish Hospital Extension Campaign is collecting funds. I have no doubt that this fund-raising effort is being crowned with success and that, in the very near future, buildings, housing extended laboratory facilities and that of a nurses' home, will rise by the side of the present splendid Jewish Hospital and bring added prestige to our organized Jewish communal life.

The Jewish General Hospital has, during its decade of existence, proven a blessed Temple of Healing. But the health needs of the expanding community are of such a magnitude that the present hospital facilities are inadequate to cope with the problem.

Wherever there breathes a Jew with communal pride in our metropolis he will be most anxious to share in the hospital project and give generously toward the campaign. Due to war exigencies there is not enough of man power to provide for needed canvassers. We urge therefore upon you do not deny yourself the pleasure of giving. Send in a generous subscription on your own accord as a thank offering to the Merciful One that you live in this free land and that you enjoy the freedom of giving.

"Henrietta Szold, In Memoriam"

We mourn the departure at the age of eighty-four of the most illustrious Jewish woman of contemporary times, Henrietta Szold, who died in Jerusalem on Tuesday, February the thirteenth, in the very place where she would have wished to die.

Miss Szold was the daughter of an American Liberal Rabbi who was distinguished as a scholar and leader, and head of Temple Oheb Shalom, of Baltimore, Maryland. Her childhood home was associated with the cause of liberalism. Her father, Benjamin Szold, championed the emancipation of the Negro and fought many a battle in the cause of the black man's liberation. [illegible] a worthwhile American program in Americanization. No wonder that Mayor La Guardia, of New York, conferring upon Miss Szold, fifty years later, the freedom of this great metropolis, stated that it was that kind of program in Americanization by Miss Szold that made possible his own ascent to the mayoralty.

In 1909, Henrietta Szold visited Palestine. She was moved by the desolation she saw there, the lack of sanitation, the misery and poverty of the population. She came to love the Holy Land through the holy books she studied in the very home of her parents. Hence, on her return to America there was born the dream within her soul to do all to bring healing to the people of Palestine though self-dedication and organization. Long before Herzl, Miss Szold spoke of the urgency of Palestine for suffering Israel as a centre of culture and as a solution to end Jewish homelessness.

Hadassah was founded by her, and from 1912-1926 she was the motivating power giving direction to the growth of this North American women's organization with its program of education and health for Eretz Israel. She toured across the American continent pleading the cause of Jewish Palestine. She was the organizer of the American Zionist Medical Unit for Palestine consisting of doctors, nurses, dentists and sanitary engineers following World War I. This challenging job she was charged with by the immortal Justice Louis Brandeis, then provisional head of world Zionism. In 1918, Miss Szold established the school for nursing in the Holy Land. Miss Szold in her social service work combined the quality of a Florence Nightingale and the American Jane Adams.

Of course, she merited election to the Zionist executive in Jerusalem and she was the first woman in Eretz Israel to be thus honoured. Her election sealed a debate which lasted years on the question of woman suffrage, for the extreme Orthodox elements opposed women's right to hold office.

As a devotee of the Jewish prophets and their emphasis on universalism she laboured hard for Jewish-Arab friendship. She became an active member of "Ichud", league for unity, feeling with that prophetic spirit, Rabbi Judah Leon Magnes, now president of the Hebrew University, that a bi-national state could be established in Palestine with Jew and Arab living side by side in peace and harmony.

The most challenging hour came to Henrietta Szold when she was seventy-three years old. Realizing the need of a movement amongst Jews to save the Jewish youth in Germany and bring them to Palestine and restore to them freedom, Youth Aliyah was her creation and she nurtured this idea—travelling over continents, pleading the cause of saving the youth from the hell of continental Europe. Here is the credit for the miracle that over 12,000 Jewish boys and girls during the past decade were rescued from Germany and German occupied territory and settled upon the land of Palestine.

In 1935 it was my privilege to have been in the company of Miss Szold on the voyage from Palestine to Lucerne, Switzerland, where we attended the Zionist Congress. With what reverence and affection delegates welcomed this "mother of Israel" who at such an advanced age dared to undertake Youth Aliyah. With what courage and vigour she summoned all to meet the great crisis which has descended upon Israel. And almost to the last day Henrietta Szold worked for the healing of her people and her people's adjustment in a world broken by strife of war.

When that great American, Wendell Willkie, made that memorable tour of the globe, he sought out Miss Szold in Jerusalem. Of his call on Miss Szold in her small, simply furnished apartment after a day of interviewing of Arab leaders and talks with Sir Harold MacMichael, he writes: "But as I sat there that late afternoon with the sun shining through the windows, lighting up that intelligent, sensitive face, I at least for the moment, wondered if she in her nature, selfless wisdom might not know more than all the ambitious politicians."

In 1940, the Women's Centennial Congress named Henrietta Szold one of the hundred outstanding women of the world in the last one hundred years. There has been no greater moral asset to Palestine during the last twenty-five years than the presence and the work of Henrietta Szold.

"Somehow when people discover me,
I fall them without manner
That for what is spat my way to be free,
I might have had an easier."

What the post-war problems of Jewish rehabilitation will be like may be learned in outline from a paper by Nathan Reich, professor of economics at Hunter College, New York, which appeared in the Jewish Social Service Quarterly, and will be given in substance here.

The first thing that has to happen before any real program is begun for restoring Jewish life is the clearing away of all civil disabilities and administrative restrictions on the basis of race, creed, or ethnic allegiance. The first principle must be that people are equal. At once after that comes the enactment of measures to return property that was confiscated or acquired under duress. This is a tricky proposition, of course, but the application of this principle is a matter of right, an indication of what the war was fought for, and a practical must for the resuming of place in the economic structure. Next, people whose property was lost irretrievably must be compensated. Also, in all treaties and agreements there must be the obligation to enforce democratic rights.

The consummation of this goal may have to be through long and arduous persuasion, indirect pressure, economic persuasion, and sustained education and propaganda, and it may not be easy, but all problems of the post-war organization will be difficult. Extending financial aid should be used as a lever to ensure a minimum standard of political conduct, internal as well as external. People who have to be induced to good behavior often get the habit.

Precise information is lacking as to what could be the inventory of Jewish human and material resources. But there is enough information to show that there has been complete dislocation, mass deportation, utter pauperization and uniform destruction of communal, religious, and cultural organizations. The ultimate survivors will be physically undermined by undernourishment and forced labor, and diseased, and also exhausted from daily fear. The Jews will be worse off than the non-Jews. The peasants will have their land; the artisan his tools; most will have their homes; many their positions; some of these positions being those from which Jews were ejected. The Jew will have little, and less to return to than non-Jews.

The task of rehabilitating the Jews will be the same as the task for the non-Jews, and then some. Food and shelter are the first requirement. But, official German sources reveal that Jews have been forced to survive on rations far shorter than the meager rations of other subjugated people, and in their case extra attention will be needed. Identification, reunion, and child care will call for immediate and skillful handling. Apart from the difficulties of transportation, the period of care and relief of Jewish repatriates returning empty-handed to nothing will be longer than the same period for non-Jews returning to land and families.

Will the returning Jews be welcomed? The attitude of the non-Jewish populations in Poland, Hungary, and Rumania in the former countries the problem should not be insurmountable. The number of Jews was small. They enjoyed equality. The restoration of Jewish property will be part of a nullification of many property transfers. The Danes, Dutch, and Norwegians may even welcome the return of Jews as symbolizing freedom. Also, in Western European countries, highly industrialized, the skills and services of Jews should open many opportunities to them for work in the reconstruction.

The situation will be vastly different in Central and Eastern Europe. Many German Jews have found new homes in the United States and Latin America. Of those left behind many have been deported and many exterminated. The small number of German Jews who may want to return could be absorbed easily in the task of putting Germany on its feet. Would they be able to live among their neighbors there? In Soviet Russia there is no Jewish problem because the social system distributes benefits and hardships without regard to racial or ethnic origin. It is outside of Russia where the crux of the problem of reintegration will be met since in this area, where economic development and agricultural output were low, with the tempo of industrialization slow, the Jew was the victim of special politically motivated anti-Jewish bars to opportunity.

The reestablishment of the Jewish people depends in large measure on the earnestness with which non-Jewish leaders embrace the principles of equality. Anti-Semitism is not inherent in people and common people are substantially the same everywhere. That hatred is channelized toward the Jews is a matter of deliberate propaganda of the political and intellectual groups at the helm of a particular society. Only thirty years ago Russia was known for pogroms and compulsory ghettoes. Germany was the symbol of enlightenment to many, the home of Reform Judaism and of classic assimilation. Yet the Germans have become the mass executioners of the Jewish people.

The position of the Jews could be made secure to a great degree by a determined and sustained attempt on the part of post-war political, religious, and cultural leaders to establish once and for all the principle of equality for all citizens. The United Nations should deal only with governments which will make such an attempt, and all agreements on economic collaboration must be contingent upon the scrupulous enforcement of all obligations involving the equal treatment of all individuals. All international agreements on relief, financial aid, and investment must contain clear provisions that the governments and people concerned must enact discrimination.

After political and civic incorporation of surviving East European Jews there remains the complex problem of economic readjustment. Post-war rehabilitation will call for occupational restructification. In spite of the keenness with which Jewish leadership speaks of large numbers of Jews returning to the soil, the main emphasis should be on industrial training, since it is in industrialization that the hope of raising the economic level of a growing population lies. Besides, industrial training fits Jews for migration to other countries.

The economic salvation of the European people rests in Europe, but migration should occupy a place in post-war reconstruction and any world organization based on freedom and equality and free access to resources and opportunity should provide for relaxation of rigid barriers. Planned migration would ease the economic normalization of Europe and also be of distinct benefit to American and Australian continents. Many Jews will want to emigrate to seek their luck elsewhere, and because they are already stranded, because they have lost all family ties and will have to build anew, and because they will not want to live among bitter memories, and will be determined to wipe out the past. Assuming a favorable political solution of the status of Palestine, that country will be the most favorable place for emigrees.

At first the main task is to rescue lives through the emergency relief approach. But reconstructive work of the long range kind should be put on a business or investment basis. Given political stability, political equality, and a movement of restoration of Jewish property and economic positions, it should be possible to enlist Jewish capital in financing business enterprises, export trade, and cooperatives in Eastern Europe. It is a supposition for American Jewry, which will shoulder the main responsibility in the post-war work, to consider seriously. I.E.s.

ings, as hundreds were crowded into a synagogue in Athens, including 300 orphans.

A third of France's 150,000 Jews subsist on relief, it was said, and in other countries large sections of the Jewish communities have no means of existence and no prospects of reintegration in economic life.

Throughout Europe, said Mr. Dobkin, it is advocated that the problem of minorities be solved by transferring such groups to the countries of their national origin.

"But what would happen to the Jewish minority in such circumstances?" he asked.

Under such conditions, he said, it is understandable that most of the 1,200,000 surviving European Jews desire to hasten their exodus and proceed to Palestine. Reports, he added, emphasized their lack of physical strength and mental capacity to weather the struggle for existence, which is difficult enough in devastated Europe "apart from the abnormal disabilities under which they continue to suffer as Jews".

Referring to the argument that Europe's Jews are not interested in coming to Palestine, Mr. Dobkin declared that 50,000 Rumanian Jews had registered for such immigration at the Bucharest office of the Jewish Agency and tens of thousands were clamoring to be listed. A delegate who returned from Transylvania said more than four-fifths of the survivors there had registered. Mr. Dobkin said the same was true in Bulgaria, Greece and other lands.

The necessity for Jewish migration was seen also for many of the 800,000 living in the Mediterranean area and in Middle East lands outside Palestine who, although not in as distressed a position as the Jews of Europe, were apprehensive about their future and were seeking an opportunity to settle in Palestine.

Mr. Dobkin said that exit difficulties imposed on Jews by some Governments of liberated countries must be overcome and suggested international action to obtain their departure. He said the Jewish Agency had proposed unifying the activities of all Jewish relief organizations in an international Jewish body that would provide relief for European Jews and arrange their transfer to Palestine.

Preliminary estimates put the number needing such relief at [illegible] In this connection, Mr. Dobkin added, rested on UNRRA, which the Jewish people hoped would act soon.

A sardonic footnote, describing the attitude of those now opposing the rehabilitation of Jewish survivors by a wholesale migration to Palestine was given by Dr. Leo Kohn, political secretary of the Jewish Agency in Palestine, who said:

"Adversaries of the Zionist movement once argued that there were too many Jews for so small a country as Palestine to absorb. Now they claim there are too few."

Miss Szold warned of the possibility of the development of a theocratic State in Palestine. "I am religious and Jewish myself," she declared at this time, "but I do not believe in the rule of priests. School children must not be drawn into religious and political strife." She was again elected to the executive committee as the convention closed.

From the outset, Miss Szold was preoccupied with the relations between the Jewish immigrants into Palestine and the Arab natives there. She expressed her conviction that friendly cohabitation could be established, but after an Arab uprising in 1930 she accused the British of not fulfilling their promises to the Jews.

Hitler's rise to power in Germany in 1933 raised a new problem before Zionists, and Miss Szold was among those who realized from the beginning of the Nazi regime that the Jews' position in Germany was hopeless and that it was essential to help their emigration from the Reich.

In 1935 the seventy-five-year-old Zionist leader became the director of Youth Aliyah, an organization sponsoring immigration to Palestine of boys and girls aged from fifteen to seventeen. She devoted the greatest part of her time to this new purpose, considering that while it was too late to save adult Jews from the Nazi regime, Jewish youths could be trained for life in new countries, made to work on the land and thus saved from the humiliating conditions to which they were doomed in Central Europe.

Wide recognition was given to this work when Miss Szold visited the United States at the end of 1935, which marked her seventy-fifth birthday. On her return to Palestine in February, 1937, she was made the first "freeman" of Tel-Aviv. A year later [illegible] the British authorities [illegible] certificates into Palestine for Jewish children. On every birthday she received as gifts from Hadassah funds collected by its members for relief to young immigrants. With these gifts she was able to resettle and retrain at least 2,000 young immigrants.

In March, 1944 Miss Szold was given the degree of Doctor of Humanities in absentia by Boston University, during a two-way broadcast between Boston and Jerusalem.

Miss Szold was stricken with pneumonia in August, 1944, and although she recovered, she was too weak, at her advanced age, to return to her home. Her office was accordingly moved into the Henrietta Szold School of Nursing, adjacent to the Hadassah-Rothschild Hospital, from which she continued to carry on her work until she was again stricken ill on Dec. 13.

On Dec. 15, 1944, Hadassah cabled her $105,000, of which $5,000 was an outright gift in anticipation of her eighty-fourth birthday three days later, for use for any emergency project she deemed important, and the balance was the first remittance against a quota of $250,000 which Hadassah had pledged itself to raise by September, 1945, for the maintenance and education of Jewish refugee children in Palestine.

HEBREW MONTH TO MARK CAMPAIGN FOR $250,000

Hebrew Month, which will be opened at a dinner on February 25, at the Hotel Astor in New York, will usher in nation-wide rallies under the auspices of Hebrew chapters which will stress the significance of Hebrew "in the preservation of the cultural values of the Jewish community" and further the campaign for $250,000 of the Histadruth Ivrith to finance its program of publications, youth, and over-seas activities.

Prof. S. E. Mirsky of New York, noted Hebrew scholar, has been named chairman of the Hebrew Month Committee with David Isaacs, prominent educator, as chairman of its executive committee. The suspension of Hadoar, only Hebrew weekly in the United States and Europe, under the editorship of Menachem Ribalow, of New York, is one of the major projects in the campaign.
